Study Online with Open Christian University and Earn a State-licensed Qualification from California, USA

What Is Transcendental Meditation and Is It Biblical?

Sixbert SANGWA • August 17, 2024

Transcendental Meditation (TM) is a popular technique that aims to achieve inner peace and spiritual renewal by focusing on a mantra, a word or sound repeated silently. Practitioners of TM believe that as the mind becomes still through this repetition, they can transcend thought and enter a state of deep bliss and tranquility. While this practice promises serenity, it is important to consider its origins, methods, and alignment with biblical teachings.

The Origins and Nature of Transcendental Meditation

Transcendental Meditation has its roots in Hinduism, particularly in the Vedic traditions of India. It was popularized by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi in the 1950s, who taught it as a means to achieve spiritual enlightenment. Over the years, TM has become widely practiced, and even scientifically studied. However, studies, including those conducted by the American Cancer Society, have shown that TM does not have a scientifically provable effect on disease, though many who practice it report feelings of relaxation and increased self-awareness.

TM and Religious Practices: A Comparison

Transcendental Meditation is often described as both a religious and non-religious practice. This dual characterization arises because TM shares similarities with religious prayer rituals, yet differs in key aspects. For instance, the basic posture for TM involves sitting quietly for 15–20 minutes with eyes closed, repeating a mantra to clear the mind of thoughts. This practice bears resemblance to certain religious prayers, such as the repetitive nature of Muslim prayers or the contemplative practices in some Christian traditions where specific postures and repeated phrases are used.

However, the fundamental difference lies in the object of focus. In Christianity and Islam, prayer is directed toward a Divine Being—God—with the intent of communion, petition, or worship. Conversely, TM does not involve any appeal to a deity; rather, it seeks to clear the mind entirely, focusing inward on the self. This distinction raises an important question for Christians: does TM align with the biblical understanding of meditation and prayer?

The Bible's Perspective on Meditation

The Bible provides clear guidance on the practice of meditation, and it is notably different from the concept of Transcendental Meditation. In Scripture, meditation is not about emptying the mind or focusing on a meaningless word, but rather about filling the mind with God's Word. Psalm 1:2 says, "But his delight is in the law of the Lord, and on his law, he meditates day and night." This verse underscores the importance of meditating on God's Word continually, allowing it to guide our thoughts and actions.

Furthermore, the Bible teaches that true peace, a fruit of the Spirit, comes not from within ourselves, but from God. Galatians 5:22 states, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, forbearance, kindness, goodness, faithfulness." Peace is a result of the Holy Spirit's work in a believer's life, not something achieved by human effort alone.

The Spiritual Implications of TM

The practice of Transcendental Meditation encourages individuals to look within themselves to transcend their current state of being. However, the Bible warns against this self-centered focus. Romans 8:5-6 provides a stark contrast: "For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit set their minds on the things of the Spirit. For to set the mind on the flesh is death, but to set the mind on the Spirit is life and peace." Here, the Apostle Paul highlights that setting one's mind on the flesh—essentially, focusing inwardly or on human effort—leads to spiritual death, whereas focusing on the Spirit of God leads to life and peace.

Transcendental Meditation, by its very nature, encourages individuals to rely on their own spirit and strength, seeking peace within themselves. This approach is contrary to the biblical teaching that true peace comes only from God, through Jesus Christ. In John 14:27, Jesus assures His followers, "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give to you. Not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid." The peace that Christ offers is a lasting peace that transcends all understanding (Philippians 4:7), unlike the temporary and often elusive peace sought through human-centered practices like TM.

The Limitations of Transcendental Meditation

While those who practice Transcendental Meditation may experience temporary relaxation or a sense of well-being, these effects are fleeting and cannot substitute the enduring peace offered by Christ. TM seeks to connect individuals with a higher state of consciousness or inner peace through self-effort, but it falls short of addressing the deeper spiritual needs that only God can fulfill. As Christians, we are called to rely not on ourselves, but on God's Spirit for true transformation and peace. Proverbs 3:5-6 instructs, "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths."

Conclusion: Is Transcendental Meditation Biblical?

In conclusion, Transcendental Meditation, with its roots in Hindu practices and focus on self-transcendence, does not align with biblical teachings. The Bible calls us to meditate on God's Word, seek His presence, and rely on His Spirit for peace and spiritual renewal. Transcendental Meditation, by contrast, encourages an inward focus that neglects the true source of peace—Jesus Christ. As believers, we are reminded to set our minds on things above, not on earthly practices (Colossians 3:2). True and lasting peace is found only in a relationship with God, through Jesus Christ, who alone can provide the life and peace we seek.
For Christians seeking spiritual growth and peace, the Bible offers the only sure foundation. By meditating on Scripture and living by the guidance of the Holy Spirit, we can experience the fullness of life that God intends for us.

Related Articles

- What Is Soaking Prayer and Is It Biblical?
- What Is Centering Prayer and Is It Biblical?
- What Is Prophetic Prayer, and Is It Biblical?
- What is Devotional Meditation, and Is It Biblical?
- Should Christians Seek After Spiritual Enlightenment?
- Why Should Christians Be Careful About Their Spiritual Associations?
- What Is the True World Hierarchy and How Does It Cooperate for the New World Order?

Further Resources

- Explore Online Ministry Opportunities at Open Christian Ministries (USA)
- Explore Christian Business Services at the Center for Faith and Work (Rwanda)
- Pursue an Affordable Online Christian Degree at Open Christian University (USA)
- Kindly Share Your Question for Consideration in Future Articles. Click Here to Submit
- Ask a Question or Utilize Our Trained AI Bot to Craft Your Evangelical Article - Begin Here

← Back to blog

Comments (0)

Post Comment